In answer to Mr. Wilson of Puerto and others about broom corn raising will answer through the News if you will kindly print it. My experience with broom corn is that it does well on soil land if the land is well prepared. First plow the sod about 2½ inches deep and double disk, thoroughly pulverizing it, keep this harrowed until planting time, this should not be done until May, at this season the ground is warm and the plants will come up and grow fast. Good seed is very important, about two quarts of seed is enough for one acre or about one bushel to 20 acres. Standard broom corn should be planted about 3½ feet apart for the rows and about 3 inches in the drill. The dwarf is said to do better 3 feet in the rows and six or eight plants to the foot. I think all the farmers that intend to plant it should write for the Farmers Bulletin No. 174. Address Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.
